MESSAGE FROM THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Dear Law Enforcement Colleague –

Interoperability

As a result of the biennial budget, the Interoperability Unit within the Department of Justice (DOJ) now resides at the Department of Military Affairs, but the impact of DOJ on the programs will live for years to come.

The Interoperability Unit had been a part of DOJ for a little more than four years, and in that time made great strides in all of its program areas.

- The Wisconsin Interoperable System for Communications (WISCOM) is in far better condition and has been stabilized. Stabilization has been accomplished through a mix of software upgrades, hardware replacements and improved maintenance staff performance by the Department of Transportation technicians. DOJ has fostered these improvements by closely monitoring all technical aspects of the program and advocating for the local users of the system.
- The FirstNet outreach and preparation for the governor's decision is completed. Outreach was completed with all 72 counties and major cities, therefore better understanding their hurdles to adopting FirstNet and obtaining their input on coverage needs and issues. The Interoperability Unit provided support to the Interoperability Council, the Interoperability Council's National Public Safety Broadband Committee, the state's Single Point of Contact, and to the governor's office in preparation for the FirstNet Opt In / Opt Out decision.
- The strategic plan for Next Generation 9-1-1 is complete.

The Interoperability Council and its committees and charter were redesigned in conjunction with the Interoperability Council following the advice of the Homeland Security Office of Emergency Communications recommendations.

- The Communications Unit (COMU) training program has been re-energized.
- And engagement levels with ally organizations such as Badger State Sheriff's Association, Wisconsin Counties Association and many others has greatly improved. Within state government, positive relationships have been built with the Departments of Administrations, Health Services, Transportation, and others.

- The largest accomplishment by the Interoperability Unit was the establishment of trust in the first responder community through demonstrated willingness to engage on behalf of the first responder's needs.

These accomplishments never could have taken place without the support and encouragement of the leadership at DOJ's Division of Law Enforcement Services. Interoperability was provided a strong direction, to focus on the first responders. It worked. The success of the Interoperability Unit during the transition was a testament to DOJ's commitment to the goals of interoperability on behalf of law enforcement.

Very truly yours,

*Brad D. Schimel
Attorney General*

There's Nothing Like a Good Night's (or Day's) Rest!

AAG Miriam S. Falk, December, 2017

Good training is essential for good performance. Training for law enforcement officers ensures good planning, good judgment, and good execution in challenging and stressful circumstances. But all the training and skill in the world cannot overcome the negative effects of chronic lack of sleep.

Sleep deprivation for law enforcement officers can result from scheduling issues, shift work, overtime work, court attendance, working on days off at other jobs, and struggling to decompress after stress-filled shifts. (1) Sometimes working on little sleep is seen as a "badge of honor," an attitude that reinforces a dangerous and unhealthy view toward sufficient sleep. Recent research has advanced our understanding of exactly what is on the line when a law enforcement officer reports for work fatigued. Being sleep deprived is comparable to excessive drinking. Not sleeping for 17 hours impairs one's motor skills just like having alcohol toxicity of 0.05 percent, while not sleeping for 24 hours is equivalent to a toxicity level of 0.10 percent. (2) At the latter level, the officer's speech, balance coordination, and mental judgment are all compromised.

We know that sleep is essential for our health and performance. Sleep allows for the continued health of our neurological, endocrine, immune, musculoskeletal, and digestive systems. It improves cognitive function, sharpens focus, enhances emotional regulation, elevates physical performance, compresses reaction times, increases resilience, detoxifies the brain, reduces inflammation, improves brain health, and improves overall health. In contrast, sleep deprivation has been found to increase the risk of cancer, shortening one's life. Lack of sleep impairs immune system functioning, resulting in more use of sick time. Those deprived of sleep suffer higher incidences of type 2 diabetes, metabolic syndrome, obesity, and heart disease.

If this isn't bad enough, insufficient sleep can cause a significant impact on officer safety. Mental health issues such as depression, anxiety, and PTSD are associated with lack of sleep and impact a law enforcement officer's ability to do his/her job well. More directly, sleep deprivation impacts on-duty performance. In a 2011 study conducted by Harvard University (3), researchers questioned nearly 5000 municipal and state police officers in the US and Canada about their sleep habits and symptoms of possible sleep disorders. Then, their on-duty performance was assessed over a two-year period. Forty percent of those studied had sleep disorders, most undiagnosed previously.

The findings were dramatic and concerning:

1. Those who had the symptoms of a sleep disorder had a 25 percent higher risk of expressing uncontrolled anger to a suspect or citizen, and a 35 percent higher chance of having a citizen complaint filed against them.
2. Sleep-deprived officers had a 51 percent greater chance of falling asleep while driving on duty. Additionally, one out of every four in the total study group reported falling asleep at the wheel once or twice a month, and also said they fell asleep while stopped in traffic, talking on the phone, or in meetings. Is this perhaps why car accidents now out-pace criminal assaults as the number one cause of death among police officers?
3. Serious administrative mistakes were found at a rate 43 percent higher for the sleep-deprived.

These findings were consistent with an earlier study (4) that found fatigued officers used more sick leave, inappropriately used force more frequently, had greater difficulty dealing with community members and other law enforcement agencies, had both more vehicle accidents and more accidental injuries, and had a higher likelihood of dying in the line of duty.

The Harvard study also found that 33 percent of the officers studied suffered from sleep apnea, a condition where one wakes up repeatedly due to breathing temporarily stopping. This rate was 8 times higher than for the general population. Sleep apnea taxes the heart, increasing the odds of getting cardiovascular disease to 90 percent for officers who suffer from it, and sleep apnea significantly increases the odds of getting diabetes, depression, and emotional burnout as well. Obesity is a big risk factor, so it is not surprising that those officers studied who were required to pass an annual fitness exam, and who were given gym equipment and paid work time to exercise, had far less sleep apnea than other officers in the study. Finally, studies show that men who sleep less than six hours for three or more days in a row experience a significant decline in their testosterone levels, reducing their testosterone to the same levels found in women in their age-group, which is about one-third of what is considered a healthy testosterone level.

We should all strive for 8 hours of sleep a night. Once sleep is lost, it cannot be made up. Healthy sleep habits contribute to achieving sufficient rest. The consequences of fatigue are so potentially dire for a law enforcement officer that devoting attention to achieving good sleep is as important as workouts or other important training. Here are some sleep hygiene practices that can improve your sleep despite the challenges of the law enforcement lifestyle:

*Reduce or eliminate the use of chemicals like caffeine and nicotine early in the day up to bedtime. These act as stimulants on your brain. (5, 6)

*Avoid alcohol prior to bed. Alcohol in a small dose might help one fall asleep, but once it wears off the depressant effects of the alcohol inhibit the brain's ability to get the restful REM sleep the body needs to recharge.

*Reduce physical and mental activity (exercise, work) before bed, and cut off electronics at least 30 minutes prior to bed. (7) Any type of activity or stimulation to the body or brain does not help the body relax in preparation for sleep, but instead causes the release of the brain chemicals that are associated with the "fight or flight" response. Removing electronics from your bedroom and dimming the lights 30 minutes before bed help your mind start winding down.

*Eat and drink less in the evening before bed. You'll avoid discomfort and won't have to get up in the middle of the night.

*Make the bedroom environment conducive to sleep by keeping the temperature a cool 68 degrees, eliminating light from your room, and dedicating your bed to sleep and sex only. (5, 8).

*Establish bedtime routines that signal to your brain that it's time to sleep, including having a specific bedtime and incorporating practices like journaling or creating a to-do list that prioritizes tomorrow's tasks so that you can mentally "let go" of tomorrow until it comes. Maintain these routines even on weekends or on vacation. (9)

*Make a plan to gradually introduce more sleep into your schedule, adding 15 minutes to the beginning of your bedtime every week or so until you are resting a full 7-8 hours of sleep.

Slighting sleep is neither heroic nor smart. The health benefits one reaps from a good night's sleep improve the quality and length of one's life, as well as providing the absolutely necessary and critical foundation for the exercise of one's best judgment and physical readiness to take on the challenging job of law enforcement officer. When you cheat yourself out of sufficient sleep, you put your safety, your partner's safety, and the safety of the community you serve on the line. So enjoy the benefits of a good night's sleep—there's nothing like it!

Veteran police detective, aged 43, with over 18 years of law enforcement experience with agency, was fatally shot. On 11/15/2017, at approximately 4:30 p.m., detective was investigating homicide in West Baltimore. During investigative activity, detective approached individual who was acting suspicious. Individual brandished firearm and fired at least one round, striking victim detective in head. It is believed, victim detective fired three rounds at subject; however, it is unknown if any rounds struck subject. Subject fled scene of incident and remains at large. Victim detective's partner arrived at scene and rendered aid. Victim detective succumbed to his injuries on 11/16/2017. At time of this communication, subject remains at large.

New Kensington Police Department, Pennsylvania

Advised police officer, aged 25, with 3 years of law enforcement experience, was fatally shot. On 11/17/2017, at approximately 8 p.m., officer attempted traffic stop for failure to stop at stop sign, when subject jumped out of vehicle and began to run. Vehicle was driven by unlicensed taxi driver commonly referred to in Pittsburgh as "jitney" driver. Officer pursued subject on foot, when subject drew firearm and fired approximately five rounds at officer, fatally wounding him. Five .40 caliber shell casings were recovered from scene, all believed to have come from subjects weapon, as officer had not fired any rounds. Search of surrounding area was also conducted and iPhone believed to belong to subject was recovered; however, attempts to unlock phone have not been successful at this time.

After shooting, subject fled from scene on foot and jitney driver fled in vehicle. Vehicle was later located and owner identified as relative of jitney driver. Interviews of both jitney driver and relative revealed jitney driver was present during attempted traffic stop and confirmed events. Information obtained also revealed that prior to exiting vehicle, subject told jitney driver he had gun and could not get involved with police. Jitney driver admitted to having fled scene because he was on parole and didn't want to get involved in situation. At 8:50 p.m. victim officer was transported to medical facility where he succumbed to wounds to his torso. Subject is known, but at large.
