MESSAGE FROM THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Dear friends,

Currently, under Wisconsin state law, only convicted felons and sex offenders are obligated to provide a DNA sample to the Wisconsin State Crime Laboratory Databank Unit for analysis. The DNA profiles collected from these offenders are stored in the Combined DNA Indexing System (CODIS) and searched across the country by law enforcement departments. Ultimately, CODIS is a powerful tool facilitating cases to be linked or even solved.

Presently, twenty-eight states and the federal government collect DNA samples from arrestees. On April 1, 2015 Wisconsin will begin collecting DNA samples from anyone arrested for a violent felony {defined in s. 165.84 (7)(ab)}, adults convicted of a misdemeanor, or juveniles adjudicated for a subset of misdemeanor crimes. It is anticipated that the number of DNA samples the Databank Unit receives will increase at least five fold to approximately 80,000 samples. To prepare for this increase the Databank Unit has hired eight new DNA analysts and eight forensic program technicians. Furthermore, the Databank Unit will be expanding in February, 2015.

In addition to changes at the Crime Laboratory Bureau (CLB), there are three major changes that will be implemented leading up to April 1, 2015, which will affect law enforcement agencies. First, several modifications have been made to the DNA collection kit. The first modification is that the fingerprint ink has been removed due to the poor quality. Next, to assist the Databank with identifying arrestee samples, there will be two sets of barcodes included in the kit. One set will be blue and is for arrestee samples only while the other is white and is for all other DNA samples collected (convictions, etc).

Second, a new electronic submission form has been created. The goal of the new submission form is to be user friendly. The submission form will only be available on eTIME and WILE-Net. The CLB encourages all law enforcement agencies who will be subject to DNA collection for arrest or conviction purposes to get an eTIME account for two reasons. First, at a glance, you will be able to identify if the person needs to be collected thanks to the addition of a DNA collection icon at the top left corner (near the sex offender and firearms sale disqualifier). Second, eTIME will automatically fill out a majority of the information on the submission form from the rap sheet, if a previous record is available.

Finally, a ten-print card, in addition to the ten-print card sent to the Crime Information Bureau (CIB) for arrest record purposes, will need to be collected and submitted with every DNA kit.

The ten print card can either be printed from Live Scan or manually collected. The additional ten-print card must be mailed with the submission form to the Crime Laboratory Bureau. In anticipation of these changes, the CLB is working closely with the Training and Standards Bureau to provide the best training possible to our law enforcement partners. Training will include statewide notification via WILE-Net, instructive posters and guidelines, and video presentations available on WILE-Net by mid-February. In addition, the CLB is continuously providing training at law enforcement executive meetings, presenting at professional meetings and performing in person training events as requested.

We look forward to working with our law enforcement partners as this important program comes to fruition and provides another valuable tool to enhance public safety. If more training or resources are required please contact the Databank Supervisors, Jennifer Naugle or Melisa Wittkowske, at the Madison Crime Laboratory at 608-266-2031.

Very truly yours,

*Brad D. Schimel
Attorney General*

Trilogy of McNeely Cases (Good Faith and Exigent Circumstances) State v. Foster; State v. Kennedy; and State v. Tullberg Decided by the Wisconsin Supreme Court 12/26/2014

Introduction:

On one day, December 26, 2014, the Wisconsin Supreme Court decided three cases dealing with the applicability of the McNeely Doctrine. In two of them, Foster and Kennedy, the court held that the warrantless forcible blood draw for an OWI case was a 4th amendment violation under McNeely. But the court refused to suppress the blood test results in each case because it reasoned that the police performed the seizures before McNeely was decided; consequently the police in good faith were operating within the law as it existed at the time. In Tullberg, the court did not even get into the good faith issue opining that the blood seizure was permissible, even in a McNeely world, based on exigent circumstances.

State v. Foster

Facts:

The police stopped Foster's vehicle for speeding. After noting several factors that indicated that Foster had been drinking, the police had Foster perform field sobriety tests, which he failed. Foster was then arrested for O.W.I. and eventually Foster refused to submit to a blood test under the Implied consent law. The police then did a forcible blood draw, and the test showed that Foster's blood-alcohol level was .112

The Defendant's Argument:

The defendant argued that under McNeely the forced blood draw was unconstitutional as the police should have procured a search warrant. While recognizing that the challenged blood draw occurred before McNeely was decided, the defendant argued that McNeely had retroactive applicability since it involved a fundamental constitutional right.

The State's Argument:

The state argued that the blood test result should be admissible since the police followed the law as it existed at the time of the seizure

The Wisconsin Supreme Court Holding:

The Wisconsin Supreme Court agreed with Foster that McNeely has retroactive applicability and that the police violated Foster's constitutional rights when they performed a warrantless non-consensual seizure of Foster's blood. But the court also ruled that the blood test was admissible because the police were following the law as it existed at the time of the seizure. Therefore, the police were acting in good faith and consequently the exclusion of evidence was not a proper remedy.

State v. Kennedy

Facts:

The defendant struck a pedestrian as she crossed the street. The police immediately responded to the scene. The defendant admitted that he was the driver of the vehicle and the police noted that the defendant had glassy and bloodshot eyes, had slurred speech, had a strong odor of alcohol on his breath, and was swaying back and forth. Shortly thereafter the police learned that the pedestrian had died from her injuries and Kennedy was taken to the hospital for a blood draw. The warrantless blood draw showed Kennedy to have a blood-alcohol level of .216

The Defendant's Argument:

Like in Foster, the defendant argued that the police should have gotten a search warrant for his blood and that, under McNeely, the warrantless non-consensual seizure of his blood was unconstitutional.

The State's Argument:

The state reprised its argument in Foster; the police were operating in good faith reliance on the law as it existed at the time of the seizure.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court Holding:

The Wisconsin Supreme Court again held that McNeely has retroactive applicability and therefore the police violated Kennedy's constitutional rights when it performed a warrantless non-consensual seizure of his blood. But the court held that police were acting in good faith reliance on the law as it existed at the time of the blood draw and accordingly, the blood test results should not be suppressed.

Cautionary Notes on Foster and Kennedy:

It is important to understand that McNeely is now the clear law of the land and the good faith exception to the exclusionary rule is only applicable to any blood draw taken before McNeely was decided. For all blood draws performed after McNeely was decided, the police must get a search warrant for blood and can only make a lawful warrantless seizure under consent or extreme exigent circumstances.

State v. Tullberg*:*Facts:

The defendant was involved in a fatal, one vehicle accident when his truck ran off the road. There were three passengers in the defendant's truck. The accident scene was chaotic with people suffering different degrees of injury and at one point the defendant searched for one passenger he could not find, and after a short while the defendant left the scene because he was in violation of his probation. Eventually the defendant's mother drove him to the hospital. Around twenty minutes after the accident the police arrived and spent the next 30 minutes investigating the scene. Ultimately the police found the deceased passenger, whose body was pinned under the driver's side of the truck. While the police were investigating the accident scene the defendant's father arrived and he appeared to be very shook up and was talking frantically. The father explained to the police that his son had looked hard for the passenger (who the police found deceased) but could not find him. The father received a phone call while with the police and he gave the phone to the police who were advised that Tullberg was en route to the hospital. The police then spent 30 minutes driving to the hospital.

Ten minutes after arriving at the hospital the police met with Tullberg who claimed that the deceased was the actual driver of the truck. But while claiming he was not the driver the police noted that the defendant appeared to have been struck by an airbag because the hair on his right forearm was singed and also smelled like the residue from a deployed airbag. Only the airbag by the driver's seat of the truck had deployed. The police observed that Tullberg smelled of intoxicants, had slurred speech, and blood shot and glassy eyes. Further investigation showed that the deceased could not have been the driver, as he could not have been ejected from the vehicle, if he was the driver, as he was a large man and the driver's side window was intact and only very partially rolled down. Pursuant to its investigation, the police finally determined that they had probable cause to believe that Tullberg was the operator of the truck. At this time it was 2 and one half hours after the accident and the police felt that because of the passage of time, they could not wait for a search warrant before drawing blood. Therefore the police made a warrantless, non-consensual seizure of Tullberg's blood which revealed a score of .141.

The Defendant's Argument:

The defendant argued that under McNeely the forced warrantless seizure of his blood was unconstitutional.

The State's Argument:

As in Foster and Kennedy the state argued good faith since this case predated McNeely. Also, the state argued that the blood draw in this case was permissible under McNeely because of exigent circumstances.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court Opinion:

The Wisconsin Supreme Court did not touch the good faith doctrine, instead ruling that the blood seizure in this case was permissible under McNeely, because there were sufficient exigent circumstances to justify the police not getting a search warrant. The court recognized that while McNeely clearly establishes that the fact that alcohol dissipates quickly in the blood stream

Is not by itself exigent circumstances, McNeely allows for exigent circumstances to be found in the right case. The court held that this was the right case as more than 2 and a half hours had passed since the crash before the police had probable cause to arrest Tullberg. This left very little time to get a search warrant. Of significant importance was that the police did not act inefficiently investigating the case. Moreover, much of the delay was the defendant's fault for first leaving the scene and later lying about who the driver of the vehicle was. Under all the circumstances of the case the court held that the police had the requisite exigent circumstances to justify a warrantless blood draw.

Cautionary Note on Tullberg:

This case involved a substantial but reasonable delay as the police were investigating a serious crash with a fatality, and had to engage in a follow-up investigation to determine the driver. It will take a case such as this to justify the police going with a search warrant for a blood draw in a McNeely world. Also, it was a very compelling circumstance that it was the defendant and not the police who primarily caused the time delay. In almost all instances, short of a case such as this one, the police will have to get a search warrant for blood in an OWI situation when the defendant does not provide consent.
