MESSAGE FROM THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Dear Law Enforcement Colleague,

The Sandy Hook Elementary School shootings in December, 2012, forced educators, first responders, parents and school communities to revisit school security and emergency preparedness measures. Our mutual goal is keeping students and staff safe in all school buildings. How we improve school security and manage emergencies on school campuses will be one topic discussed at this year's Attorney General's Summit. The Summit will be held June 12-13 at the Chula Vista Conference Center in Wisconsin Dells.

Highlighting the program is school security expert Ken Trump, who will share his insights into best practices and new approaches to school security. Trump will dissect some of the myths, hype, and real priority areas for school safety post-Sandy Hook, the human factor in school security, the role of support staff in keeping schools safe and secure, and the impact of social media on school safety.

The Summit also will feature anti-bullying expert, Dr. Joel Haber, who will discuss the relationship between bullying and cyber bullying as well as some of the misperceptions we may have about those connections. In afternoon breakout sessions, Dr. Haber will help law enforcement and educators identify and properly respond to bully situations.

Attendees at this year's Summit will learn about Wisconsin's new anti-bullying laws and the latest trends in child exploitation. They will hear how a local agency investigated a case that began on a social networking site and moved into sexting before ending with the sexual assault of children. All participants will receive the 4th Edition of the Safe Schools Legal Resource Manual, a Department of Justice publication that outlines the legal rights and obligations of school administrators and law enforcement working in schools.

On June 11, we also will offer a pre-Summit training program, "In Harm's Way: Law Enforcement Suicide Prevention." Participants will explore the latest information about suicide within law enforcement, develop in-house training, and hear first-hand from officers and administrators affected by suicide in their agencies.

Finally, the Summit provides numerous opportunities to network with my leadership team and your colleagues from across the state. Once I learn of your concerns and issues, I determine how the Department of Justice might be of assistance.

A detailed agenda and Summit registration information are available on WILENET and the Department of Justice website (www.doj.state.wi.us). I hope to see you at the Chula Vista in June.

Sincerely,

LEGAL POINTS

Missouri v. McNeely Decided by the United States Supreme Court- April 17, 2013

Issues:

Whether the police can lawfully perform a warrantless blood draw in all OWI cases where there is a refusal. The United States Supreme Court rejected the automatic exigent circumstance doctrine for a warrantless blood draw in all OWI cases. Instead the court requires a search warrant for the blood unless the police can show an exigent circumstance for their particular case, over and above the scientific fact of alcohol dissipation. This United States Supreme Court case effectively overruled the Wisconsin Supreme Court case of State v. Bohling, which allowed for warrantless blood draws in all OWI related cases.

Facts:

The police stopped the defendant's truck after it was observed speeding and repeatedly crossing the centerline. The police observed that the defendant had bloodshot eyes, slurred speech, and the smell of alcohol on his breath. After the defendant performed poorly on field sobriety tests he was placed under arrest for OWI.

The defendant refused to provide a breath sample and the officer did a forced blood draw under the doctrine of probable cause and exigent circumstances. The blood sample measured at 0.154, well above the legal limit of .08.

The Missouri Supreme Court Holding:

The Missouri Supreme Court held that the blood test should be suppressed since it was obtained without a warrant and that the state had failed to show sufficient exigent circumstances.

Missouri's Argument to the United States Supreme Court:

The state of Missouri appealed its Supreme Court ruling to the United States Supreme Court. Missouri argued that it is an automatic exigent circumstance that alcohol dissipates quickly in the blood stream.

The United States Supreme Court Holding:

In a 4-1-3-1, opinion the United States Supreme Court affirmed the Missouri Supreme Court holding. The high court held that while it is true that alcohol dissipates quickly in the blood stream, it would not endorse this fact as an automatic exigent circumstance to justify a warrantless blood draw in OWI cases. Instead the court ruled that in most instances the police should get a search warrant before seizing the blood. The court reasoned that the only time the police could make a warrantless blood draw in an OWI case is when there are sufficient exigent circumstances in the particular case, above the fact of dissipation that would demonstrate that it would be too difficult to get a warrant in time.

Impact for Wisconsin:

This case has a big impact for Wisconsin since it overrules the Bohling rule, which had been the law in Wisconsin for approximately 20 years. Bohling had allowed for a warrantless forced blood draw in all OWI cases where a defendant refused to take a test, but now under McNeely this is no longer true and the police will need to get a search warrant. Since this case came down District Attorney Offices around the state have been working out procedures so as to facilitate the application for search warrant process.

Key Point:

McNeely has no effect on Wisconsin's Implied Consent regime. Indeed the McNeely majority endorsed Implied Consent as a legitimate tool in combating OWI. There is also no change in refusal law or the penalties therein. The big change is that after a refusal and the police want a blood draw, they will need to get a search warrant unless they have exigent circumstances in the particular case greater than the basic fact that alcohol dissipates quickly in the bloodstream.

Incident Summaries

Jackson Police Department (JPD), Mississippi, Veteran Detective, aged 40, with over 17 years law enforcement experience, was fatally shot on 4/04/2013 at approximately 5:15 p.m. Detective had arrested subject on outstanding arrest warrant charging him with capital murder. Detective and other JPD Officers transported subject to interview room at JPD Headquarters. Subject was interviewed by two detectives when Detective removed subject's handcuffs so advice of rights form could be signed. While handcuffs were off, subject attacked Detective. During struggle, assisting JPD detective, who was in room, drew weapon and fired at subject but missed. Due to assisting detective's firearm malfunctioning, Detective left interview room to get assistance. During struggle, subject was able to obtain Detective's service weapon, 9mm semiautomatic handgun, and fatally shoot Victim Detective multiple times. Subject then turned firearm on himself and committed suicide.

Bardstown Police Department, Kentucky, Veteran Officer, aged 33, with 7 years law enforcement experience, was fatally shot on 5/25/2013 at approximately 2:30 a.m. Officer was returning home after working his shift. While en route he observed debris on exit ramp. Officer turned on his emergency lights and exited his patrol vehicle. While Victim Officer was outside patrol vehicle, he was subsequently fatally shot multiple times. At time of this communication, no suspect(s) has been arrested. Investigation is being conducted by Kentucky State Police.

Advanced Concepts for Law Enforcement Crisis Management

Purpose & Intended Audience:

This law enforcement training is intended for Chiefs, Sheriffs, and middle and upper law enforcement management. Upon completion, attendees should better understand how to manage a major law enforcement incident. Examples of a “major law enforcement incident” include:

- On-duty officer death
- Officer-involved shooting
- Multiple homicide or other major crime
- Other high-profile law enforcement response

This training is specially targeted at incidents that are primarily or exclusively the responsibility of law enforcement agencies. Although floods, tornados, hazardous material leaks, and other disasters are “major incidents” that may be touched upon, they are not specific to law enforcement and are not the primary focus of this event.

This is not a traditional ICS/NIMS class—attendees are presumed to already have ICS/NIMS training. Instead, this course offers a global perspective on multi-agency incidents. Attendees will leave with a better understanding of key principles; what works; and a toolkit to help manage such an event.

Learning Objectives:

1. Better understand the dynamics of a multi-agency law enforcement incident.
2. Anticipate predictable developments as a major incident evolves.
3. Familiarize with available resources—including traditional and developing.
4. Crisis management operational considerations and tools.
5. Post-incident considerations and actions.

Hours & Dates:

Length of Training	12 hours (8-hr day and 4-hr morning)
