MESSAGE FROM THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Dear Law Enforcement Official:

As you know, President Bush proposed to eliminate the Edward Byrne Memorial Grant and Law Enforcement Block Grant and create a new Justice Assistance Grant program with drastically reduced funding. I have written to members of the Wisconsin Congressional delegation urging their opposition to Bush Administration plans to eliminate these critical law enforcement grants to Wisconsin communities.

These cuts are being proposed in the name of funding additional Homeland Security measures - measures that could be more effectively made without sacrificing the safety of Wisconsin communities. Under this plan, the current funding levels could be reduced by over 40%.

The Department of Justice and Wisconsin law enforcement agencies depend on these dollars to provide important public safety functions. Currently, Wisconsin receives $9 million from the Byrne Grant and $600,000 from the Law Enforcement Block Grant. The Department of Justice relies on these funds in two essential areas: $850,800 reimburses counties for their cost of serving victims and witnesses of crimes, and $4 million goes toward anti-drug task force (MEG) units throughout the state.

Other law enforcement agencies have been supported over the years with positions or special projects that would be severely impacted as well by these cuts. Thirty-five (35) Assistant District Attorneys are paid using Byrne monies. Another example is a recent upgrade to the Justice Department's Automated Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS) which serves every local law enforcement agency in Wisconsin.

I told members of Congress that if the overall budget package cuts these current law enforcement appropriations from $1 billion to $586 million and subsequently passes those reductions onto states, it will have a devastating effect on our communities and public safety. Especially hard hit will be smaller and rural agencies that have no other resources to draw upon by themselves.

The first line of defense is local law enforcement and the communities they protect and serve. It would be counterproductive to advance Homeland Security initiatives at the expense of local law enforcement.

Very truly yours,

2003 ATTORNEY GENERAL'S LAW ENFORCEMENT CONFERENCE

More than 200 state and local law enforcement officials joined Attorney General Peg Lautenschlager in Appleton for the Attorney General's Law Enforcement Conference on May 22nd and 23rd. The Honor Guard from the Neenah Police Department opened the conference.

Conference attendees were asked to pay tribute to three law enforcement individuals killed in the line of duty this past year. Those honored were Deputy Michael Shannon from the Adams County Sheriff's Department and Officers Robert Etter and Stephanie Markins from the Hobart-Lawrence Police Department. Bagpipes were provided by Steve Elliott from the Appleton Police Department.

Presentations explored the future of policing in a constantly expanding technological world. Much of the discussion centered on how law enforcement can balance the freedom of citizens while preventing criminal and terrorist activities.

Peter Higgins began the morning session with a presentation on The Future of Biometrics in Policing. Peter Higgins, founder of Higgins & Associates, International, has 34 years experience in the information technology field and has been involved with biometrics since the late 1980s. He chaired the International Association for Identification's Automated Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS) Committee for five years and is a well known consultant in the field of large-scale biometric procurement and testing.

The afternoon session addressed the Maryland Sniper Shootings, presented by Philip C. Raum, from the Montgomery County Police Department. Lieutenant Raum is currently the Acting Director of the Major Crimes Division of the Montgomery County Police Department and served as 2nd in Command of the Montgomery County Police Sniper Task Force investigative component. His distinguished career has included six years in the Homicide and Sex Section of the Major Crimes Division, 2.5 years as a general investigator, 1.5 years as an investigative section supervisor, and two years as an executive officer in the Investigative Services Bureau

On Friday, Thomas J. Cowper provided a preview of emerging technologies for law enforcement entitled "Future Technology and Policing." Captain Cowper is a 19-year veteran of the New York State Police with nine years patrol experience as a trooper and sergeant, including four years as a member of the State Police Mobile Response Team (SWAT). For the last 10 years he has been involved in the procurement, implementation and management of law enforcement and public safety technologies, serving as the Director of Communications for the State Police and currently as Associate Director for the Statewide Wireless Network project under the State's Office for Technology. Captain Cowper is the Treasurer of the Society of Police Futurists International and a member of the FBI Futures Working Group, a collaborative partnership between the FBI and PFI to study and strategize about the future of law enforcement.

LEGAL POINTS

If you have any comments regarding Legal Points, please contact Dave Perlman, Assistant Attorney General, P.O. Box 7070, Madison, WI 53707-7070, 608/266-1420, fax: 608/266-7869.

NOTE: Unfortunately last month's entry State v. Verkler was missing the court's holding. So this case is repeated again in its completed form. I apologize for any inconvenience.

State v. Verkler 2003 WI App 37

Legal Issue Involved:

This case discusses whether or not it is reasonable to refuse an OWI chemical test because a defendant is denied the right to counsel. The appellate court affirms the general rule that wanting to first consult with counsel before deciding whether to submit to a breath test is not a valid reason for a refusal unless somehow the arresting officer assures or implicitly suggests that the defendant does have a right to counsel as to whether to proceed with the OWI tests.

Facts:

The defendant was stopped for speeding. During the routine traffic stop the officer noted that the defendant's eyes were bloodshot, his speech, slurred, and he smelled of intoxicants. The officer asked the defendant to submit to field sobriety tests but the defendant declined citing that he suffered from multiple sclerosis, a medical fact confirmed by the two passengers, the defendant's wife and the defendant's law partner. The officer had no reason to doubt the medical explanation so he then asked for the defendant to submit to a PBT test and the defendant refused, stating that he did not believe in the test. The officer ultimately arrested the defendant for OWI.

Before being transported the defendant asked the officer for permission to converse with his law partner and permission was granted. They conversed privately for a few minutes and eventually the officer halted the conversation and transported the defendant to the police station.

At the police department the officer advised the defendant that his law partner could not join them in the intoxilyzer room. Once in the intoxilyzer room the defendant again asked to speak to his law partner but this request was denied. The officer pointed to a newspaper clipping on then wall which stated that a person is not entitled to have the advice of counsel as to the decision whether to take the breath test. The officer then read the defendant the Informing the Accused form and the defendant without hesitation refused to take the test. The officer processed the matter as a refusal.

Defendant's Argument:

The defendant argued that his refusal was reasonable because he had been denied his right to counsel.

The Appellate Court's Holding:

The court of appeals rejected the defendant's arguments and held that his refusal was unreasonable. The appellate court reaffirmed the standing legal principle that there is no right to counsel as to the decision whether to take an evidentiary test subsequent to an OWI arrest. The court did recognize that there is a limited exception to this rule- that is when an officer mistakenly gives the clear impression to a defendant that there is such a right to counsel. If the officer does give the impression that the defendant is entitled to counsel then an officer can not "pull the rug" out from under the defendant.

However, the appellate court reasoned that in this case the officer did not imply or assure the defendant that he had a right to counsel. While the officer did allow the defendant some time to talk to his law partner right after the arrest he clearly refused to allow the lawyer to play any role in the actual processing of the case at the police station and clearly indicated to the defendant that he had no right to counsel as to the decision on the tests.

Note:

Officers should be aware of the limited exception to the general rule that there is no right to counsel at the OWI testing decision-making phase. This exception is triggered if somehow the officer clearly gives the impression that there is such a right. So never during an OWI arrest should an officer suggest that there is a right to counsel as to the tests and if a defendant seeks to assert that right the officer should clearly indicate that no such right exists.

(cont . . .)

State v. Erickson
2003 WI App 43

Legal Issue:

This case involves a forcible blood draw of a non-arrested subject in the OWI context. The appellate court ruled that forcible blood draws are permitted prior to an arrest if the officer has probable cause to believe that the subject's blood currently contains evidence of a drunk-driving related violation or crime.

Facts:

The defendant while driving a truck struck another automobile killing one occupant and injuring another. The defendant told the responding officer that she fell asleep and remembered waking up crashing into the other vehicle. The defendant advised that she was driving home after dropping off a friend after a party. She told the officer that she had one beer, but she told medical personnel that she had three beers. The officer could not smell an odor of intoxicant on the defendant, but was told by medical personnel that when they had arrived on the scene she had a strong odor of an intoxicant. The officer did not arrest the subject but arranged for a forced blood draw, which showed her blood alcohol to be .103% by weight. The defendant was convicted of homicide by intoxicated use of a vehicle and causing injury by intoxicated use of a vehicle.

Legal Background:

The operative case for forced blood draws in the OWI context is State v. Bohling which requires four prongs to be satisfied before the seizure is permissible. 1) the blood draw is taken to obtain evidence of intoxication from a person lawfully arrested for a drunk-driving related violation or crime, 2) there is a clear indication that the blood draw will produce evidence of intoxication, 3) the method used to take the blood sample is a reasonable one and performed in a reasonable manner, and 4) the arrestee presents no reasonable objection to the blood draw. In this case it is the first prong that the defendant challenged because she had not been arrested prior to the test.

Defendant's Argument:

The defendant argued that the blood test should have been suppressed because the officer had not arrested her for OWI prior to the test and that such an arrest is a necessary predicate to the seizure.

The Court's Holding:

The appellate court first noted that even under Bohling an arrest is not absolutely required because in Bohling there is a footnote stating that having probable cause to arrest substitutes for the predicate act of a lawful arrest. More significantly the appellate court expands Bohling by holding that in the absence of an arrest probable cause to believe blood currently contains evidence of a drunk-driving violation or crime satisfies the first prong of Bohling.

Key Point:

In vehicle cases mere probable cause to believe that blood contains evidence of drunk driving is sufficient for a forced blood draw even if the officer has not yet decided whether or not there is enough probable cause to arrest the subject.

Note:

While this case is an important precedent it should be handled carefully. It is important to note that the situation involved was a fatality. Most departments require a minimum of a second or third offense OWI for forced blood draws. This case should not compel a change in that policy. Naturally, the cleanest situation for a forced blood draw is to first arrest the defendant for an OWI offense. However, this case allows more latitude for forced blood draws when an officer has indicia of drunk driving in an accident/fatality situation but perhaps not yet enough probable cause to make an arrest. Please consult with your District Attorney's office to get their perspective on this significant case.
