MESSAGE FROM THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Dear Law Enforcement Official:

On November 1, 2011, Wisconsin's concealed carry law went into effect. The new law allows qualified applicants, for the first time in our state's history, the opportunity to carry a concealed handgun, taser, billy club, or a knife that is not a switchblade. While I support law-abiding residents who wish to exercise their Second Amendment right in this way, I understand and appreciate how this new law affects our law enforcement partners.

Since the law was signed in July, Department of Justice (DOJ) personnel have been working diligently to ensure systems are in place for law enforcement to access the information when statutorily allowed. During the month of October, staff from our legal services division and training and standards bureau educated more than 1,000 law enforcement officers across the state about Act 35, as well as the many changes to existing statutes. The training's PowerPoint presentation, supporting documents, and a video link from one of the sessions is available on our WILENET site. In addition, the DOJ's public site was updated recently to include links to the CCW application, training documents, emergency rules and an expanded FAQ section with links to the various documents. I hope you find these resources to be helpful.

As Wisconsin residents begin to carry concealed weapons, the DOJ also has made efforts to make sure license holders know what's expected of them, and recommended, if they interact with law enforcement while carrying a concealed weapon. Each license holder is receiving an educational pamphlet with the license that contains instructions to help ensure the safety of the licensee and of the officer.

This is a drastic change for law enforcement, but I am confident in the professionalism, competence and ability of Wisconsin's law enforcement officers to successfully adapt to the changing legal parameters without compromising officer safety or the civil rights of our citizens. Thank you.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "J.B. Van Hollen". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

*J.B. Van Hollen
Wisconsin Attorney General*

J.D.B. v. North Carolina

Decided by the United States Supreme Court
(June 2011)

Issue:

This case deals with the issue of whether Miranda is required for an interrogation that occurs in a school.

Facts:

A uniformed police officer took J.D.B. from his classroom to a closed door conference room, where police and school administrators questioned him for about 45 minutes about a string of local burglaries. The boy's legal guardian, his grandmother, was never contacted, and he was not given a Miranda warning. The police did eventually tell the child that he was free to leave, but the investigator also told the boy that he could get a court order to put JDB in juvenile detention. The boy eventually confessed and helped the police retrieve the stolen items.

Defendant's Argument:

J.D.B. argued that his confession should be suppressed as he was not given his Miranda warning. The defendant argued that the presence of law enforcement and school administrators was sufficiently intimidating so as to render the situation custodial, even though it took place in a school and not at a police station.

The State's Argument:

The state relied on ample precedent holding that a school is not typically a custodial setting that would require a reading of the Miranda warning. The state further argued that J.D.B.'s age (13) is irrelevant to a custody analysis for Miranda purposes.

The Court's Holding:

The United States Supreme Court (5-4) agreed with J.D.B. and suppressed his statements. The court reasoned that since the boy was taken out of the classroom, and then was confronted by the police and other school officials, it was unreasonable to assume that he would feel free to go. Moreover, the court held that age (the boy was 13) is a relevant factor in a Miranda custody analysis.

Note: This is the first time that a court looked at a factor such as age in a custody analysis. Normally age and other physical and mental characteristics are more relevant to a voluntariness review. It is unlikely that this case will be expanded into adult Miranda holdings. The case emphasized that minors need more protections than do adults. This case is also in lock-step with the growing trend to give police less leeway when questioning minors.

Bottom Line for Police:

It will be increasingly difficult to question a child in school without the need for a reading of the Miranda warning. If the police wish to do so, they should limit the amount of school officials or police present and should constantly remind the child that he/she is free to discontinue the interview and return to class. Also the younger the child is, going down to age 12, the more likely the child in school will be perceived to be in custody.

FBI OFFICERS KILLED

These statistics represent preliminary information received by the FBI during January through September 2011: Fifty-three law enforcement officers have been killed due to criminal actions. During the same time period in 2010, 40 officers were slain. Circumstances involving the 53 officers slain in 2011 are as follows: 12 were attempting other arrests, ten were ambushed, seven were answering disturbance calls (three being domestic related), seven were investigating suspicious persons or circumstances, six were performing traffic pursuits/stops, five were involved in tactical situations, two were killed during investigative activities, two during robberies, one while handling prisoner(s), and one officer was slain during exchange of gunfire with offender. Twenty-three deaths occurred in the south, 16 in the midwest, seven in the west, five in the northeast, and two in the U.S. Territory of Puerto Rico. Firearms were used in 46 of the 53 killings (34 handguns, six rifles, and six shotguns), four by vehicles, two officers were slain by personal weapons, and one was killed with knife/other cutting instrument. Thirty-three of the 53 officers were wearing protective vests. There have been 49 separate incidents in which these 53 officers have been slain. Forty-eight of the 49 incidents have been cleared by arrest or exceptional means. Thirty-six law enforcement officers have been accidentally killed. During the same time period in 2010, 58 officers were accidentally killed. Circumstances involving the 36 officers accidentally killed in 2011 are as follows: 22 officers were killed in automobile accidents, four were struck by vehicles, three were killed in motorcycle accidents, one in aircraft accident, one was accidentally shot, one drowned, one was fatally injured while detonating department-issued explosive device, one was killed when attacked by cow, one was struck by lightning, and one officer was killed during training exercise. Twenty of the accidental deaths occurred in the south, eight in the west, four in the midwest, and four in the northeast.
