MESSAGE FROM THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Dear Law Enforcement Colleague,

The 2013-2014 Regular Legislative Session adjourned in April and several bills of interest to the Department of Justice (DOJ) and our partners in law enforcement passed both houses of the Legislature and have been recently signed into law by the Governor. Here is a sampling:

Act 223 provides a statutory mechanism for the DOJ to provide courts and law enforcement agencies access to orders not to possess a firearm resulting from certain mental health proceedings. Prior law did not allow courts to access mental health orders when considering the return of firearms to restraining order subjects at the termination of those restraining orders; nor did prior law allow law enforcement officers to access mental health orders when investigating possible violations of the possession of firearms.*

Act 214 updates and improves many of the professional standards governing law enforcement employment and enables the Law Enforcement Standards Board to be more responsive to needed training improvements in the future. The act also amends the DNA at Arrest law so that agencies will submit samples to the DOJ upon collection rather than storing and securing samples until courts determine the samples can be analyzed.*

Acts 194, 198, & 200 address Wisconsin's heroin problem. Act 194 offers immunity from prosecution for the possession of a controlled substance to someone who brings to a health care facility, or summons assistance for, a person suffering an overdose. Act 198 updates criminal and regulatory law concerning prescription drugs and controlled substances to encourage and facilitate drug disposal programs. Act 200 authorizes certain first responders, EMTs, law enforcement, and fire fighters to administer Narcan or another opioid antagonist to a person suffering an opioid-related overdose.*

Act 362 represents a multifaceted approach to the complex problem of human trafficking and other sensitive crimes. Some of the key provisions of the new law include: broadening the definition of "commercial sex act"; allowing evidence of similar acts to be admitted to pending trafficking and child sex crime cases; expanding the types of property subject to seizure and forfeiture, and streamlining the forfeiture proceeding in trafficking and child sex crimes; and encouraging deferred prosecutions and special dispositions for those charged with or convicted of prostitution as a result of being a victim of trafficking.*

Act 264 modifies the current Crime Alert Network to ensure that law enforcement reports of missing adults with mental disabilities or dementia are disseminated to persons engaged in broadcasting or outdoor advertising.*

One of my roles as Attorney General is to act on behalf of Wisconsin's local law enforcement before the state Legislature. I am always interested in, and make efforts to develop, inform, and promote, legislation that positively impacts law enforcement. I am pleased with these recent changes made by the Legislature. I encourage you to contact the DOJ if you have suggestions for changes to existing law that will promote public safety. Thank you.

Sincerely,

J.B. Van Hollen
Attorney General

Huff v. Reichert Decided by the United States Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit 3/10/14

Issue:

Though a civil case, this case looks at important police issues such as length of detention, frisks, and dog sniffing during a traffic stop. The opinion ruled against law enforcement and provides some clear direction as to what is proper and improper during a traffic detention. The case involved an Illinois police officer, but since the opinion is from our 7th Circuit it has some precedential value.

Facts:

After attending a Star Trek convention in St. Louis, subjects were returning to their home in Ohio. The vehicle was stopped in Illinois because the police had observed a minor traffic infraction. The officer asked Huff for his driver's license, insurance and registration. The officer asked Huff about his criminal history and Huff advised that he had been arrested around twenty years earlier. The officer did a records check and found out that Huff had been arrested for battery and for marijuana cultivation in 2001. The officer told Huff that he was going to let him go with a warning. The officer then asked to speak to Huff's passenger, as the passenger seemed nervous. The officer then told Huff that the police had some problems with motorists in the area carrying drugs and guns in their vehicles. Huff denied having any of these items and when the officer asked Huff if he could search the vehicle Huff responded by saying that he would just like to go on his way. The officer then asked if his canine could sniff around the vehicle and Huff said OK but wondered what was going on since he had only been stopped for swerving and he didn't think he swerved. Huff then asked if he was free to go and the police officer, said "not in the car".

Next the officer did a pat-down of Huff and his passenger. Then the dog started to sniff the vehicle as the officer commanded, "Show me where it's at. Find it". The officer later admitted that he had been trained not to use these commands during a dog sniff. The dog alerted and the officer said he was going to search the vehicle and Huff said, "do what you gotta do." The officer did not find anything and 50 minutes after the original stop and 34 minutes after giving Huff a warning ticket, the police told Huff that he was free to go.

The Defendant's Argument:

The defendant sued law enforcement for violating his 4th amendment rights. He raised many complaints concerning the extent of his seizure during a routine traffic stop.

The Police Argument

The officers argued that they have immunity from law suit when performing their discretionary functions.

The Court of Appeals Holding

While recognizing that the police have qualified immunity for their discretionary decisions, this immunity does not shield them from provable constitutional violations. The court held that there were legitimate issues raised by the defendant; 1) Extending a traffic stop 34 minutes to accommodate a non-reasonable suspicion investigation is problematic unless the extended contact can be couched as a consensual encounter. 2) The frisk was potentially problematic because there was a legitimate issue of consent and also there was little to suggest that law enforcement should be concerned that Huff was armed and or otherwise dangerous. 3) There were questions about the reliability of the dog sniff since the police violated their command protocol. Accordingly, the court of appeals held that Huff had the right to pursue his claims against law enforcement and the police in this case had no immunity.

Note:

While a civil case, this fact pattern raises several relevant issues to law enforcement. Among them are the following:

- 1) If the police engage in a frisk more than twenty minutes after a stop, they need to explain what occurred during the stop that changed the dynamic so as to make them suddenly feel threatened.
- 2) The duration of an investigative detention must be related to the reason for the stop. If the police develop reasonable suspicion of an offense different than the one that triggered the stop, then an extension can be justified. However, if they are merely "going fishing", they must first clearly end the traffic stop and then set up the further contact as a consensual encounter.
- 3) Departing from the established protocol in conducting a dog sniff can impact on the reliability of the sniff.
